Bio / Admin History: Victor Clement Rowley (1887-1976) was the eldest son of Adelbert Bateman Rowley, an immigrant from the United States who operated a sawmill at Mulhurst, Alberta. Victor worked as a timekeeper and storekeeper for his father's business. In 1914 he married Grace Rogne (Rodney) of Millet. They had four children, Ruth, Tom, Del, and Ronald. In 1915 Victor moved to Millet to open a machine shop and act as an agent for the products of the sawmill. From 1921 to 1939 he operated a general store in Millet.
                       He operated a general store at Rochfort Bridge, Alberta from 1939 to 1942, then lived in retirement in Vancouver, Victoria, and Edmonton.
