The paper contained advertising and local news items and eventually also contained "plate" from other newspapers. The paper published from October 1946 to August 1949. The numbering of the issues was sometimes inaccurate and the day of publication changed from time to time. In June 1947 Pue moved the printing operation to Killam and started another weekly there. In July 1948 another move was made, this time to Edmonton and the format was reduced to a smaller size tabloid. The format was again increased with the first issue in the fourth volume published in 1949.
